Value of free thyroglobulin in predicting response to antithyroid drugs: correlation with thyrotropin. The ability of free thyroglobulin (Tg) to predict the therapeutic effect of antithyroid drugs has not been previously evaluated. In this study, the ability of Tg to predict the therapeutic response of antithyroid drugs was evaluated. Sera from 62 patients with Graves' disease were tested for free Tg before and after treatment with methimazole, propylthiouracil (PTU), or a combination of both drugs. Twelve of the 62 patients failed to normalize their Tg levels and did not achieve remission during treatment. There was a correlation between Tg and TSH at diagnosis ($r = 0.69$, P less than 0.001) and posttreatment ($r = 0.58$, P less than 0.001). Tg was higher before (median, 7.0 micrograms/L; range, 0.9-25.0) than after (median, 1.1 micrograms/L; range, 0.4-16.5) antithyroid drug treatment. The Tg concentration increased significantly after antithyroid drug treatment (P less than 0.05), and the free Tg concentration was more easily detectable than total Tg. The level of Tg correlated with the increase in free Tg after antithyroid drug treatment. 5ec8ef588b
