Donald Trump's racist birtherism came under the spotlight again this weekend after he attacked Joe Biden for once supporting something vaguely vaguely, which we know to be not true, "China," in a not-so-veiled way. The details are still fuzzy, but it looks like Trump may have inspired another death threat against Biden: According to a Philadelphia police officer on Saturday, someone called in a threat of a mass shooting at a Biden campaign event in Philadelphia. Hearing about all this, I honestly couldn't figure out what "chewing off a human" meant (as the far-right likes to say when they're describing cutting up someone with acid), until it hit me: The guy calling in the threat was obviously making a parody of a Trump birther tweet: Should Trump appoint a new Supreme Court Justice before the election? When you buy something at Amazon, their charges are automatically debited from your bank account, and they're all too happy to do that. Sometimes, their system fails and you end up paying twice for the same order. In the case of Walmart, it doesn't seem that's the situation. A Redditor took to the site to post about what seemed to be a duplicate order of an item which he'd bought earlier in the day. His order was of an electric toothbrush for $12. It got shipped to him and he opened it to find that it was a brand new and unused item, which he had the chance to review and try for himself. All was well until the next morning, when he received a chargeback. To his dismay, he was charged twice for the same item. He asked his bank to explain the issue, and they replied saying that the chargeback was correct. The closest Walmart comes to a correction for what happened is with a statement from Walmart: "Thank you for bringing this to our attention. This particular item was returned on the same day and sold the next day." If it's true that the item was "returned on the same day", then there's a problem in the first place, since the chargeback should've never taken place. Of course, if you're an Amazon Prime user, your orders can be shipped in just one day, so you might not even notice the double chargebacks. The exact same thing happened to this person. He claims to have a receipt that proves his innocence, and hopes to be refunded soon. Next time you're feeling underwhelmed by life, remember the good fortune of at least one person out there who's experiencing the opposite. A few people have found themselves in the unfortunate position of having missed out on a previously booked flight, or being denied boarding on a plane, or having a flight delayed. Unsurprisingly, every one of those cases turn into a joke as soon as the news trickles out. Just recently, a girl 2edc1e01e8

Welcome to a new 3D screensaver for your Windows desktop. It has two components, a 3D simulation of Earth in orbit and a 3D map of the planets in our solar system. The screensaver is full screen and can be configured by adjusting the duration of each cycle of the simulation. The interface is very simple and only shows you options when you mouse over them. A menu with options to quit the simulation, toggling the autostart on/off and to change the time of the next update can be found at the top of the interface. Space Trip 3D Screensaver will run on all versions of Windows and requires Microsoft.NET Framework 2.0 or later. GameTime 2.5.3.254 Free GameTime 2 is a simple and friendly interface that allows you to schedule game tasks like auto-launching, starting games in the background, and others. You can also save your games and continue them at a later time. The program supports multiple monitors and has a built-in 3D chess game. GameTime offers a time synchronization option and a timer display and countdown. The interface is customizable. Key features of GameTime: * Scheduling. You can schedule a task to run automatically at a specified time or date. * Backups. Backup games to files that you can open in any software program. * Auto-launching. Start a game that you launch from the folder of the game executable. * Exported games. Save games, pause, and resume games that you've launched. * Multiple displays. GameTime displays each game on a separate monitor. * Time synchronization. You can synchronize GameTime with a time server to automatically launch games when the time changes. * Timer display. You can set GameTime to display a timer at a specified time, date, or both. * 3D chess. Play a 3D chess game directly from the Windows taskbar. * Other. You can easily set up a game launcher, open a game from a folder, resume a game from where it last left off, and open a game in the background. * Installation manager. Setup in a few simple steps. What's new in version 2.5: * Improved scheduler interface. * Auto-launching support. * Started a game in the background. * Added the ability to view the times when scheduled tasks are triggered. * Improved synchronization with a server. * Improved

The Beagle and Alfie cats woke up in the middle of the night and saw a spaceship in the driveway of their home in New Haven. Their owners, Toni and Dave Flory, were on a family vacation in South Carolina. But they returned home and found a ship outside their carport.
